* An Information Technology Fee has been added to all Distance Education credit and noncredit courses that are Web-Based (WB) or Web Enhanced (WE). This fee supports the development and maintenance of the technology infrastructure of the University. This fee entitles you to a Penn State Access Account (available services vary with fee). An Access Account is a user ID and password that enables Penn State students to use Internet services. It also permits students to enter an on-line course and use Penn State resources and services. Access Accounts are necessary to provide security for both you and the University.

Credit Courses: The information technology fee for credit courses is $80, which provides you with a Penn State Access Account for one year, including e-mail, course access, and University Libraries resources. Your year of access begins when you enroll in your first credit course. There is no information technology fee applied to additional credit courses you might take during your year of access. Noncredit Courses: There are two information technology rates for noncredit courses: $6 = Penn State Access Account for one month, including personal Web space; $3 = Penn State Access Account for one month, including User ID and password (course access only)
